===== ChordWriter is a very simple and easy to use app. ChordWriter takes strings and creates chord symbols for your chord chords. For chords, you need to enter the chord letters first, then press the "Add" button. Then, you can call up lyrics and chordbox inputs and edit the chords you have added. Press the "copy" button to copy the entered chords. Then, you can write chordboxes with the chords you copied. Then, press the "paste" button to enter the chordboxes to the chordboxes list. You can edit the chordboxes of the entered chords you copied. The chords you copied are displayed under the chordboxes list. I have just gotten it to show up in iTunes and at the bottom it shows a blue line around the screen but no app name. Any ideas why? I really like it but thought I would first ask for help. I can get no other app to show up in iTunes apart from ChordWriter. So, it's not like I'm missing a device, or something, just that I can't get it to show up. If you did get it to show in iTunes, try a factory reset on your iPhone/iPad. This will allow you to start a new app on your iPhone or iPad. Okay, I did a factory reset. Then, I downloaded the iPhone app and it showed up. Weird! I just bought this app and can't download in my iPhone for some reason. I've tried multiple devices and none will even start the download. Any suggestions to try? I need this to teach my daughter how to play guitar, but we have a lot of reading to get through and this is the only thing that I've seen that allows for the text of music to be in the actual chords as they are played. I'd love any help. You need to contact Apple Support and get them to log in with you to the Apple Dev Center and they can help you get the app on your devices. It is not easy to get approved and you have to go through an approval process. You can also look up if there is a similar App in iTunes and it can be seen in the apps section of iTunes. Hey, I just noticed this. This app is the one I have been looking for to learn tabs for guitar. Amazing app. The user interface is a bit hard to get used to though. I find myself looking at songs in iTunes to identify chords
