Just click the Open button on the Basic window toolbar or the File icon in the Windows taskbar. If you have multiple open images, you can also see them and open the next image by using the Forward, Backward or Scroll Up/Down buttons. To open an existing image, start by clicking the Open button on the Basic window toolbar or the File icon in the Windows taskbar. You can also open an image by double-clicking the image file icon on the Windows desktop. If you have multiple open images, you can see them and open the next image by using the Forward, Backward or Scroll Up/Down buttons. 2. I can't see my image on the Windows taskbar. How do I get my image to appear? If you have a normal size window, move it to the top or bottom of the screen. If you have a small window, change the window size to be as small as possible. If you are still having problems with your image appearing on the Windows taskbar, check the following: The images may be missing or hidden by another program. To see hidden files and folders, use Windows Explorer (see Choosing a file location in the section Starting to work) or Windows Explorer on Mac. To show hidden files and folders, click the View tab and uncheck Show files and folders that are normally hidden. Some images are misnamed. Double-click the image and rename it, using the same name as the original. This usually works without a problem. 3. I can't open an image. What do I do? If the image file is missing, you may need to download it from another image hosting site, such as If you are having trouble opening the image, check the following: Do not have a corrupt.jpg image. Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Photoshop Elements and related software can have problems opening corrupted images. First try removing the file from your computer and trying again. If that doesn't work, try sending the image file to the site (details are 05a79cecff

Q: Unable to debug VS 2015 with nunit 2.6.3 I installed Visual Studio 2015 and nunit 2.6.3. I want to debug a project that references NUnit. This is the message I get: But when I go to Debug -> Attach to Process, the only Nunit tab I get is Nunit.ConsoleRunner for 2.5.2 How do I do it for 2.6.3? A: I had the same problem and fixed it just now. Go to your solution -> right click on the project and open properties. (app.config), Click on the "Debug" tab and look for the Version attribute, then select it and press the OK button. Example: A: I had a similar issue, and found the problem to be that I had set the 'Copy Local' property of NUnit.Core in my project to 'True' (rather than 'False') The reason for this was that I was using NUnit 2.6.3 locally on my machine to run some unit tests, and had copied the whole NUnit.Core into the project to make it a DLL. Somehow my project, which was referencing NUnit, was picking up this reference to NUnit.Core 1.0.0.0 rather than the one I had locally. So I removed the reference to NUnit.Core in my project, and it started working.
